

Safeguarding Children from Honour Based Abuse and Forced Marriage

Background

So-called honour-based violence is an international term used by many cultures for the justification of abuse and violence. Honour-based abuse can go hand in hand with forced marriages, affecting young men and young women. The Redbridge Violence Against Women and Girls \(VAWG\) Strategy has identified honour based violence and forced marriage as a focus, as the very nature of it increases the likelihood of this abuse going underreported.

Learning Outcomes

By the end of this course participants will:

- Understand the definitions of honour based abuse and forced marriage and the impact on children.
- Have explored cultural issues and community beliefs regarding honour and marriage and the differences between “arranged” and “forced” marriage.
- Be able to recognise forms of honour based abuse and identify risk indicators in an agency setting.
- Be able to identify practice issues with regard to cultural sensitivity, community beliefs and religion.
- Gain an understanding of the Forced Marriage Protection Orders and criminal legislation.
- Have looked at case examples.
- Be aware of the local safeguarding referral processes and both national and local support agencies.
